THURSDAY. MAY 26, 1897.

Memorial Day.

Monday next the surviving members of the Grand Army Posts will observe the sacred duty of decorating the graves of their late comrudes in arms who have gone over to the great majority. The day, however, should not be looked upon as one simply set apart for the old vetetans to scatter flowers in the cemetaries wherein the remains of the Nations dead have found a last resting place, but should be regarded as a fitting occasion for all loyal citizens to pay their tribute of respect to the memory of those gallant men who laid down their lives in defense of the 1 nlou. Of late years there has been a gradual tendency to permit the real significance of the day to drift out of sight, especially among the volunger generation, some of whom thoughtlessly look upon it as a day free from the ordinary routine and therefore a proper time for general recreation. This we regard is all wrong and believe it should be discouraged as much as possible. No other public occasion in the year is more beavily freighted with valuable lessons for the young—lessons encorated to the child have been such the such them the full meaning of loysity and love of nones country than Momerotal Pay with its beautiful services in honor of the votrans whose graves sind as perpetual monuming of the ranks of the survivors are growing thinner each ever and soon the duty of decorating the graves of the solder dead will devolve on the rising generation who should a cept it as a sacred trust fully realizing and apprecasing its significance. To the end the hold Matterseas had been fasten the the then the hold had been fasten to the case of the Brittania case and the rising the work of the water of the water of the water of the case of the Brittania case of the solder dead will devolve on the rising generation who should a cept it as a sacred trust fully realizing and apprecasing its sign sentenced to imprisonment for election frauds beside which the case in question pales into utter insignificance, it is useless for Mr Cleveland to talk about being un able to pardon crimes committed against the election laws It cannot be said that there was any thing in the Mullen's case date Bradley calling for elemency as the Judge who passed sentence upon Mullens expressed his deep regret that the law did not afford a punishment adequate to his crime. The fact is Mullens was a useful man for the Democrats and the President did not in tend that his party should be deprived of his services for any length of time

Will Not Have It

Fx-Senator Thurman, of Ohio, has written a letter positively declining to be a cand date for the Democratic nomination for Governor The old gentleman evidently has no intention of being used as a lever to strengthen the Cleveland boom for a second term. For some time past a per-sister t effort has been made to get him into the held, but this letter would seem to settle the question

A Discredited Reformer. No public speaker of our day carries into the public forum a greater command over the conscience of his hearers than Mr (urts—\text{Vet} 1 ort Evening Post

If by "hearers' the Post refers exclusively to the little Mugwump contingent the may be correct in its reference to Mr. Geo William Curtis, as the Mugwumps have no consumere to speak of, but so far as the people at large are concerned Mr. Curtis lost in a political sense every vestige of public confidence by his stuffit. vestige of public confidence by his stultifying course in the cumpaign of 1884 It J. M. BLAISDELL, M. D., was not because he was opposed to any particular candidate, for it is the right of every man to decide for himself in such matters, but after participating in the Republican convention without raising a dissenting voice when the nomination was made, even remaining to take part in the nomination of a candidate for second place on the ticket, he was morally bound to Spring Opening! There are very few people in this country to-day who are not firmly convinced that the salary paid by the Harpers was the MRS. R A. WEBSTER'S ART PARLORS, sole consideration that influenced his subsequent course in the campaign | The reform cant was simply a convenient closh Wednesday and Thursday, lane 1st and 24. to hide his retreat

THE BRITANNIC AND CELTIC BROLGIST LP |New York Tribune, May 24 | Exhaustive inquiry at the offices and pier of the White Star (ompany, at Castle Garden and among the pussengers on the steamships Celtic and Britannie, confirms the report published in the Pribung yester-day morning that not more than four persons were k lled in the collision of those two vessels 5.0 miles east of sandy Hook hat Thursday Notwithstanding the fact that hearly sixty hours intervened between the time that the accident occurred and the hour that the two damaged boats dropped their anchors off sandy Hook, neither the officers nor passengers had been able to secure positive information as to how many were missing The consequence was that a number of wild rumors were circulated, placing the loss of life at from three to twolve. The lowest estimate was, of course, put forth by the White Star officials, but so many of the Efritanic's passengers insisted that they had seen bodies floating about in the broken fourth compartment, that it did not seem unlikely that the larger number mentioned was correct.

The panic while selved the teconomic that the panic while selved the teconomic contract. two vessels/350 miles east of Sandy Hook that the larger number mentioned was correct.

The panic which seized the steerage passengers when the boats came together its largely accountable for the exaggerated reports, as for the time everybody seems to have looked out solely for himself. Nothing like an accurate idea could then be obtained of those who were transferred from the Britannic to the Ceitic, and many of those who were taken of the former boat were thought to be among the dead by their friends who remained behind. The purser of the Ceitic was thoughtful enough to make a list of the people who were brought to his boat from the Britannic, and it was not until this was compared with the steerage list that the actual number and names of the dead were known. They were:

A Case in Point In decaying the application for a pardon in the case of a man covicted of fraudulent registration, the President wintes I cannot pardon a crime against the election laws except in a case presenting unusually strong consideration for clemency. Such offences are the worst of all crimes. Yo doubt this will be prided in the Administration organs as evidence of the President's devotion to duty. It reads well and would pass for the sentiment of man an opposed to election frauds but for the unfortunate fact that the President has not always entertained such correct ideas of the duty of the Chief Executive IIaving extended ever utive clemency to the notorious I leut Mullens, of Ohio, who was honestly convicted and rightrously sentenced to imprisonment for election frauds beade which the case in question.

Ex-Governor Richard | Jacobs, a lifelong hentucky Democrat, has grown tired of seeing all the offices in his State handed over to ex-Confederates, and he announces that he shall vote for Republican Candi-

Washington, May 25. The parade of troops to day for review by the President afforded the first opportunity for seeing at once the entire body of those forming the encampment and was one unqualified success. The head of the column started from camp up 17th Street, promptly at 12 o'clock-and reached the grand stand erected for the President and invited guests ten minutes later. The stand had selfst for nearly 300. With the President were Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. Welsh, Mrs. Marsey, Col. and Mrs. Lamont. Gen. Sheritian and severni members of his staff, in full uniform were their escorts. Among the guests of the drill were Gov. Lee, of Virginia and staff, Secretary Endicott, Senators Sherman and Gorman, Mexican and Japanese ministers and ladies of their families and a liberal aprinking of other legation and army people.

SHE. A History of Adventure BY H RIDER HAGGARD CHAPTER VII

USTANE SINGS.

When the kissing operation was flaished—by the way none of the young ladies offered to pet me in this fashion, though I saw one hovering around Job, to that respectable in dividual a evident alarm—the old man Billah advanced, and graefonally waved us into the cave, whither we went, followed by Miss Ustane, who did not seen inclined to take the bints I gave ber that we liked privacy. Before we had gone five paces it struck me that the cave that we were entering wavinum of nature's handiwork, but, on the centrary, had been hollowed by the hand of man. So far as we could judge, it appeared to be about 100 feet in length by 50 wide, and very loft, resembling a cathedral aisle more than any thing cha. From this main aniso opened passages at a distance of every twelve or fifteen feet kailing, I suppose, to smaller chambers. About fifty feet from the entrance of the cave, just where the light be gan to get dim, a fire was burning and threw huge shadows upon the gloomy walls around Here Billah halted, and saked us to be seated, saying that they would bring us food and accordingly we squasted ourselves down upon rings of skins which were spread for us, and watted. Presently the food, consisting of goats flesh boiled fresh milk in an earthen ware pot, and boiled cobs of Indian corn was brought by young girls. We were almost starving, and I do not think that I ever in my life before cat with such satisfaction. In deed, before we had flinished, we literally eat up everything that was set before us. When we had done our saturnite host Bll lail who had been watching us in perfect is lence rose and addressed us. He said that it was a wonderful thing that had happened No man had ever known or beard of white strangers arriving in the country of the People of the Rocks. Sametimes, very rarely, black men had come here, and from them they had heard of the existence of men much whiter than themselves, who sailed on this deal in slipp, but for the acustence of men much whiter than themselves, who sailed o CHAPTER VII

We had, however, been seen dragging the boat up the canal and be told us frankly that he had once given orders for our destruction, seeing that it was unlawful for any stranger to enter here, when a mes-sage had come from She-who-must-be-obeyed, saying that our lives were to be spared, and that we were to be brought inther.

'Pardon me my lather,' I mierrupies as this point "but if as I understand, She who-must-be obeyed lives yet further off, how could she have known of our approach?' Billait turned, and seeing that we were alone—for the young lady, Ustane, had with drawn when be began to speak—said with a

I shrugged my shoulders at this and he proceeded to say that no further instructions had been received on the subject of our disposal, and this being so, he was about to start to interview. like to go to bod.

Without a word he rose, and taking me politicly by the hand, advanced with a lamp to one of the small passages that I had noticed opening out of the central cave. This we followed for about five paces, when it suddenly widened out into a small chamber, about eight feet square and hewn out of the living rock. On one side of this chamber was a stone slab, about three feet from the ground and running its entire length, like a bunk in a cabin, and on this he indicated I was to sleep. There was no window or air hole to the chamber and no furniture, and on looking at it more closely I came to the disturbing canclusion (in which I atterward discovered I was quite right) that it had originally severed for a septing place for the discillation of the despite that a sleeping place for the living, the slab being designed to receive the corpse of the departed. The thought made me similate in spite of myself; but seeing that I must sleep somewhere, I got over the feeling as best I could and returned to the cavern to got my blanket, which had been brought up from the boat with the other things. There I met Job, who, having been inducted to a similar spartment, had fistly declined to sleep in it, saying that the look of the place gave him the horrors, and that he might as well be dead and buried in his grand-fabbris brick grave at code and expressed his determination of sleeping with me if I would allow him, which, of course, I was only too glad to do.

The might passed very confortably on the whole. I say on the whole for personally I went through a most horrible mightmare of being buried allys, induced, no doubt, by the sepulchinal maters of my surroundings. At dawn we were aroused by a loud trumpeting sound, produced, as we afterwards discovered, by a young Amahagger blowing through a hole bored in its side into a hollowed elephant hole bored in its side into a hollowed elephant task, which was kept for the purpose.

Taking the hint, we got up and wont down to the stream to wash, after which the morning meal was served. At breakfast one of the women no longer quita young, advanced and publictly lissed Job. Her spring to his feet and publictly he woman a buxom party of about 30 from him.

I am sure I havent en couraged how Oh Lord's she's coming for me again. Hold her, Mr. Holly, please hold her! I can't stand it I can't indeed. This has nover happened to me before gentlemen, never. There's nothing against my character, and hers he hivoke off and I am as hard as he could down the cave and for once I saw the Annahoger laugh. As for the woman however she did not haugh. On the contrary, she seemed to bristle with fury, which the mokeny of the other women about only seaved to intensify. Indeed, nothing about its created so great a smastion as our tobacce smoke—not even our fire arms. After this we succeeded in reaching a stream and taking our bath in peace, though some of the women not excepting Usrane, showed a decided inclination to follow us even there.

By the time we had fluished this most refreshing bath the sun was setting indeed, when we got back to the big cave it had all ready set. The cave itself was full of people gathered around fires—for several more had now been lighted—and eating their evening meal by the furid light and by that of various amps which were set about or bring up on—the walls. These lamps were of a rude manifacture of baked earthenware, and of all shapes some of them graceful enough. The larger ones were formed of big, red earthenware pota, filled with clarified melted fat, and having a reed wick stuck through a wooden dask which filled the top of the pot, and this sort of lamp required the most constant attention to prevent it going out whenever the wick burned down, as there were no means of turning it up. The smaller hand lamps, however which were also made of baked thay, had a wick manufactured from the end of the lamp to which a sharp piece of hard wood was attached to pierce and draw it up with whenever it showed signs of burning low.
